How we approach the issue?

Observations

A semi-structured qualitative method to explore phenomena.

How did we do observations

Simply recorded everything related to food, gave a brief description and took pictures as we start the visiting

Interviews

a type of qualitative analysis, helps to find detailed insights from individual participants in the community

How did we interview

Two people (Vice President and a volunteer) were interviewed by verbally answering questions. Group members collected data by taking notes and briefly write down descriptions from respondents' answers.

What we found

-Meat draw (

- -Sunday afternoon
- -$3 for 1 meat draw
- -All meats from IGA

-Events (Parties etc.)

- -Order pizza or Chinese food from local restaurants
- -People bring their own food

-Donation from Remembrance Day $\longrightarrow$ Bursary

- -Only people with military background could apply
- -For education fund or for retraining of solider who come back from military or pay for their rent/ financial stress

Take Home Message

People regard the West Point Grey Legion as a social place instead of somewhere to get food

The Legion is going to redevelope and will consider having a kitchen

Suggestion: The community can provide more food services for seniors in Legion and also encourages people around the community to help as volunteers while events holding.

Legion could look for financial support from charity type companies if still find tax is an issue after renovation
